

Pure Evil

Pure Evil goes across the Channel and invades Ma Première Galerie (My First Gallery) au Musée en Herbe. On the occasion of L'Explosion ! Pure Evil presents a selection of his works with dark humour.

28th june - 17th july 2011

(With the Lebenson Gallery's partnership.)

Before becoming an artist, Pure Evil was a clothing designer for many streetwear clothing companies. Charley did not consider himself as an artist until the day he was expelled from America when he was staying in California without visa. Pure Evil was born.

Back in London, the streets of the old European city inspire him and it became a great playground of freedom without pressure. With Basquiat and Blek le Rat as mentors, Pure Evil is the spiritual descendant of Sir Thomas More (author of Utopia, satire of the English society of the 16th century). The artist will follow his illustrious ancestor by exploring the dark facets of English society and even the Apocalypse myth but with a scathing humour. In the day, Doctor Charley runs his own his eponymous gallery but at night, Mister Pure Evil runs through the streets looking for virgin walls to graff.

Today, Pure Evil has his own gallery in London. A sort of laboratory where he can experiment and make art with many different mediums: painting, collage, sculpture, photography or electronic music. This modern wonder-room is also a gallery in wich Pure Evil exhibits his works as well as creations of other artists. Not so famous in France, his exhibition at Ma Première Galerie from the Musée en Herbe is a rare occasion to experiment an atypical artist whose works are exhibited worldwide.

Crossie

In Ma Première Galerie, each artist exhibits with a talented young person.

CROSSIE is a Brighton UK based stencil artist who specialises in winged creatures of all kinds, her nature based layered pieces are influenced by her background in textile design.

She is an enigma wrapped in dark mystery...
